

DELIVEROO: A FIRST SUCCESSFUL STRIKE

12 August 2017

Yesterday around 150 of us, including over a hundred delivery drivers from all the various delivery companies, gathered on place de la Republique at Paris. The biggest group where Deliveroo drivers, those under the old and new contract alike. After several people, including a worker from Bordeaux, had spoken, we left to protest in front of various restaurants. A simultaneous protest was held in Lyon.

We know that our strike has had an economic impact because some restaurants had to block orders in solidarity and Deliveroo had to open additional delivery time slots.

The unprecedented nature of our movement and its echo in the media forced management already yesterday to officially communicate with us. We are, however, not taken in by this move and will continue to demand a per route fee of 7.50€, with a minimum of two routes per hour guaranteed.

In order to get Deliveroo to negotiate, we call again for a strike throughout France on Monday, 28 August, the date when the new contracts will come into force:

- We call upon the CGT, Solidaires and the Front social, who have supported us, to help us make this call known in the twenty cities in France, where Deliveroo do business.
- We ask our coworkers across Europe, who have already been mobilized in the past, to join us to make this date the first international strike against Deliveroo.

We also plan a general assembly in Paris on Sunday, 20 August, to prepare for this strike day. Until then, each biker has the task of convincing others to join in our struggle.

Together, we can derail Deliveroo!
